'Open the Economy'

In Bold Move, State to Loosen Reopening Tier Requirements

BY BRIAN HEWS

California will begin targeting 40% of all vaccine doses for people who live in the most vulnerable neighborhoods inoculating people most at risk from the coronavirus to get the state's economy open more quickly.

The doses will be spread out among 400 zip codes with about 8 million people eligible for shots, with most of the neighborhoods concentrated in L. A. County and the Central Valley. The areas are considered most vulnerable based on access to transportation, education level, household income and housing status.

The state's health department will target vaccines strategically to reduce transmission, protect the healthcare delivery system and save lives.

Once 2 million vaccine doses are given out in those neighborhoods, the state will make it easier for counties to move through reopening tiers that dictate business and school reopenings.

Right now, a county can move from the purple tier to the lower red tier based on having seven or fewer new COVID cases per 100,000 people per day over a period of several weeks. but that metric will change to 10 new cases or fewer. In the red tier, businesses such as restaurants and gyms can open for indoor services at limited capacity.

Schools that want to access new state funding must move into the red tier and provide in-person learning for students in kindergarten through grade 6 and at least one grade each in middle and high school.

About 1.6 million vaccine doses already have been given to people in those 400 zip codes, and the state is expected to finish next week.

Once the state gives out 4 million doses in those neighborhoods, it will revise the metrics for getting into the even less restrictive orange and yellow tiers.

The changes mark another round in California's vaccination and reopening plans. People 65 and over, farmworkers, educators and emergency service workers are also eligible for shots.

More counties have already moved into the red tier as hospitalizations and deaths drop. The state's average 2.2% test positivity rate over 7 days is a record low.

State officials are making it easier to move through tiers, saying the likelihood of widespread transmission will decrease as more people are vaccinated.

L.A. County could move into the tier with fewer restrictions as early as next week, though any actual lifting of constraints would not happen immediately.

Cerritos Will Renovate the Mullikin Building for Local Company

A ten year lease and $7.5 million in repairs tabbed for the local eyesore.

BY BRIAN HEWS

The city owned property that sits at 12616 183rd St., the "Mullikin Building," has been an eyesore in the city for a few years.

Back in 2014, the Cerritos City Council, led by Mayor Carol Chen, current Councilman Bruce Barrows, and George Ray, voted to establish a museum at a cost of $6.7 million, with $3.64 million in funding coming from California and insurance proceeds.

City documents indicated at the time that the remaining $3 million would be funded through the Redevelopment Property Tax Trust Fund.

During that time, the city contracted with the Astor Museum to build out and create a car museum housing the Astor Collection of cars and memorabilia.

Artesia Battles Homeowner for Violation Fees

BY BRIAN HEWS

The city of Artesia is at its wits end when it comes to the property located at 18506 Clarkdale Ave.

According to title reports, the house has been owned by Chimanlal and Pushpaben Patel since 2014, purchasing the 806 square-foot home for $410,000

Since 2015 the property has had numerous code enforcement cases for nuisance violations related to overgrown vegetation. Since 2018, nobody has lived there and the house looks very unkempt.

See ARTESIA page 12

The cars were moved to Moore Street in Cerritos, at the city's expense, while the Mullikin building was renovated using elaborate plans that included local company's sponsorship of several display rooms.

But Astor died in 2016, after which Cerritos taking possession of the one-of-a-kind collection and ceased construction on Mullikin.

Now finally after nearly five years, a company that is currently in Cerritos will consolidate operations and lease the building.

The company is called REVOLVE, a publicly traded company with over $600 million in revenue and a $36

Why Aren't More Cities Helping Seniors With COVID

Pico Rivera is giving free rides to seniors to get vaccine shots in Downey.

BY BRIAN HEWS

The City of Pico Rivera, in collaboration with Fiesta Taxi, is offering Pico Rivera residents age 65 years and older free transportation to the Los Angeles County COVID19 Vaccination site at the Los Angeles County Office of Education facility located in the City of Downey.

With vaccines available for residents who are 65 years of age and older, City Officials cited the importance of their senior residents to get vaccinated as soon as possible.

With the City's Dial-A-Ride program already in place, the program allowed for seniors to make transportation reservations for medical appointments within a six-mile radius of the City. City Officials decided to use the

SCIENCE

Fantastic Voyage: Microbots Can be Guided to Tumors

Guided by magnets, the microbots can penetrate areas without damage.

BY BRIAN HEWS

A Culver City company is testing a pin-head sized craft that can be guided directly to a tumor and deliver cancer-killing chemicals; it's the stuff made of science fiction.

The novel invention would allow drugs to be administered only on their intended target site avoiding nefarious side effects such as hair loss or stomach bleeding.

Bionaut Labs, a remote-control medical microrobot start-up, is trying to be the first company achieve the feat.

Over the past decade, various artificial carriers have been integrated to develop unique microbots that can swim or crawl inside the body.

Experiments in test tubes, lab dishes or animals have shown, for example, that the bots can be steered by magnetic fields, light pulses or the chemical properties of their surroundings to deliver drugs to desired locations.

THE MICROBOT will have the capacity to unload its drug payload right on the tumor.

THE MICROBOT sitting on top of a penny will deliver drugs to targeted areas.

Such mobile bots could also manipulate cellular interactions or generate heat to induce other beneficial effects.

All microbot approaches have in common the idea of combining a mobile microbe — one that can crawl or swim — with a structure that can carry cargo such as drugs or do other jobs.

Researchers have engineered a library of artificial carriers made from different materials, with different sizes and shapes, that can hook up with the microorganisms without killing them.

Such diversity is necessary because no one type of microbot would be suitable for all purposes

Bionaut is capitalizing on new technology with a new treatment that uses the microscale robots to deliver drugs to locally to targeted disease areas to help patients suffering from severe brain disorders such as Parkinson's, Huntington's, Brainstem Glioma, and stroke.

The company is targeting spine or skull tumors first, and will test in clinical trials by 2023.

Most drug delivery today is injected into the bloodstream, which requires high doses and often causes side effects.

According to news reports, Bionaut is targeting brain stem gliomas, a type of cancer that affects children and young adults, as a first step.

Brain tumors are particularly difficult to treat, radiation affects a larger area and most drugs cannot penetrate the blood-brain barrier; the Bionaut robot would get around that.

"The brain is uniquely designed to protect itself from external factors. This makes medical intervention extremely challenging. The Bionaut technology opens the door to precise treatment for a wide variety of severe brain disorders," said Santosh Kesari, M.D., Ph.D., Chair of the Department of Translational Neurosciences, Director of Neuro-Oncology at St. John's Cancer Institute, and a member of Bionaut Lab's Advisory Board.

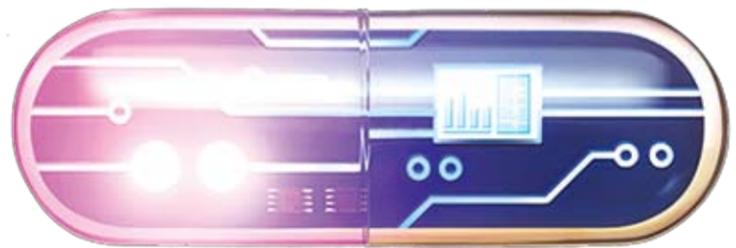

A doctor introduces the Bionaut devices into the spinal column through a catheter. The devices are large enough to be visible on a live X-ray. Magnets positioned around the head and neck allow the doctor to guide the robot to the tumor.

Once in position, a signal tells the robot to unload its payload of drugs after which the doctor guides the devices back out of the body.

Another team experiments in the colons of both mice and pigs under anesthesia. Pig colons are particularly similar to human ones. They used ultrasound to test in real-time how well the microrobot moved around and even tested the microrobot's ability to carry and release a drug payload in a vial of saline. All these experiments proved very successful.

"We were able to get a nice, controlled release of the drug payload. This means that we could potentially steer the microrobot to a location in the body, leave it there, and then allow the drug to slowly come out. And because the microrobot has a polymer coating, the drug wouldn't fall off before reaching a target location," said one team member.

The Bionaut system allows surgeons to avoid cutting open the skull and, more importantly, enables doctors to use less damaging surgery through the brain, that would be impossible without a wireless instrument.

Downey Icon Passes at 103, Given Mayors Award Posthumously

DR. MARY STAUFFER at 100 years of age you could often see Stauffer driving around town or taking classes at Downey Adult School.

BY TAMMYE MCDUFF

Downey lost an icon and one of the city's biggest supporters February 11, 2021, she was 103.

Dr. Mary Stauffer impacted the City of Downey like no other resident. Her legacy has been cemented in Downey for generations, from assisting in births and delivery's, to donating tens of millions dollars through her foundation for scholarships to the community.

Dr. Stauffer graduated from Ohio State University College of Medicine in 1943, the same year she married her husband. Her first office was a small two story office in downtown Downey, later she moved to Gallatin Medical Center on Paramount boulevard and then to Downey Community Hospital where she was Chief of Staff.

Stauffer was instrumental in the Character Counts campaign, which is why Downey can boast of a 96% graduation rate, one of the highest in the United States. She was a founding member of GOOD Gangs Out of Downey, was a member of the Downey /Sister Cities Association, Christian Business Women's Association and sat on the board of the Columbia Memorial Space Center.

At almost 100 years of age you could often see Stauffer driving around town or taking classes at Downey Adult School, "I need to continue to be active and learning," Stauffer admitted in an interview with HMG-CN in 2017, "I have so much more to accomplish. I always welcome to new ideas."

Dr. Stauffer was named Woman of the Year in 1988, named to the International Hall of Fame for Delta Kappa Gamma in 2001 and was the recipient of Older Age Citizen of Los Angeles County 4th Supervisial District Award 2002 and listed as a noteworthy physician in marquis Who's Who.

Stauffer dedicated her life for making the city of Downey a better place. "It doesn't matter where you come from or what adversity you may have to face in life, your character can lead you to great things," said former mayor and Councilman Fernando Vasquez, "Be steady, career focused and Dr. Stauffer lead the way in this thinking."

OC Sheriff Investigated Over Capitol Riot Connection

BY BRIAN HEWS

Yet another police officer is being investigated for participating in the capitol riot Jan. 6.

Special Officer Monica Alston is under local and federal investigation in connection with the riot.

Alston posted photos of herself on social media during the Trump speech outside the Capitol and , undaunted, videoed herself inside the capitol.

She was placed on paid (why?) leave Jan. 21 by the department pending an internal investigation.

According to published accounts the FBI last month searched her Irvine home.

A special officer is not a full deputy and does not retain a deputy's police powers when off duty.

Alston is not the latest sheriff's employee investigated for right-wing activity. Last year, a 13-year deputy was investigated for wearing an Oathkeeper patch on his uniform as well as the logo of the "Three Percenters."

Experts say right-wingers are pervasive among our police forces.

EDITORIAL: Program Shows the Best Route Out of Poverty is a Handout Not a Hand-Up

An experiment by the city of Stockton has opened the eyes of many, and, according to findings by the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Tennessee, should be extended to other cities, even the entire United States.

The experiment contradicts the inane argument by House and Senate Republicans concerning stimulus payments and minimum wage and makes a case for both to be implemented immediately.

Using donated funds, Stockton launched a demonstration program, sending payments of $500 a month to 125 randomly selected residents with average incomes at the city median of $46,000.

Basically it was a modified welfare program, a word that makes all conservatives cringe and who's favorite slogan is "the best route out of poverty is a hand up, not a handout."

The recipients were allowed to spend the money however they saw fit, no drug tests, no interviews, no work requirements. They just got the money, no strings attached.

The old tired argument is "give people money, and they stop working. They become dependent on welfare. They never sort out the problems in their life."

The Stockton program proved those statements demonstrably false.

Researchers Stacia Martin-West of UT and Amy Castro Baker of the UP analyzed the data from the people who received $500 a month and from individuals who did not, and the results were astounding.

The families receiving the $500 a month tended to spend the money on home goods, food, gas, and other utilities. Less than 1 percent went to cigarettes and alcohol.

The cash also assisted in paying unexpected bills, and allowed families to pay down debts. Individuals getting the cash were also better able to help their families and friends, which helps the entire community.

More importantly LCCN Republican readers, the study found that it did not stop them from working. In fact, some looked for a better job.

In the Stockton program, participants with a full-time job rose 12 percentage points, that's 14 people that looked for and got a new job because of the cash.

Finally, the money leads to happiness; the recipients were less anxious, happier and healthier than those in the control group.

Yes folks, the handout gave a hand-up.

The former mayor of Stockton, Michael Tubbs, who established the project said, "cash is a better way to cure some forms of depression and anxiety than Xanax. So many of the illnesses we see are a result of stress and anxiety, directly attributed to income volatility and not having enough to cover your basic necessities. That's true in the public-health crisis we're in now."

So LCCN readers, welfare is good, that is what this study showed, and it is a strong case for minimum wage and stimulus payments and child allowances.

Less stress, fewer incidences of homelessness, fewer skipped meals, more work, more family stability; welcome to welfare.

Democrats are currently pushing for a $300 monthly payment to low- and middle-income parents for each child younger than 6, and $250 a month for children ages 6 to 18; it is part of President Joe Biden's $1.9 trillion coronavirus-relief package.

The program is of course temporary, but even Mitt "let Detroit go bankrupt" Romney is for the child allowance.

The handout gave a hand-up.

Mayor Solanki and Barrows Fail to Wear Masks at Council Meeting

"He who has never learned to obey cannot be a good leader."
Aristotle

The Cerritos City Council conducted a special meeting to review possible City Charter changes this past March 1, any changes would have to be approved by Cerritos residents.

The changes have been proposed by City Councilman Bruce Barrows and an "advisory commission" who's members were unknown until the first review of the changes a few weeks ago.

At the meeting, as the introduction music and Cerritos scenery faded, a disturbing video picture emerged of the mayor, the mayor pro tem, and two council people, Barrows and Hu, at the dais.

It was disturbing because Mayor Solanki and Barrows were not wearing masks.

Pro tem Vo, Hu, City Manager Art Gallucci, City Clerk Vida Barone, and the City's attorney all wore masks.

The CDC currently recommends holding off on meetings and "zoom" when possible, but if you must meet, keep the number of people to a minimum, ensure good ventilation in the room, space six feet apart, and wear a mask.

Dr. Fauci said that until cases are less than 10,000 per day in the United States, wear a mask. Right now cases are 60,000 per day.

From experience, the chairs behind the dais are not six feet apart; poor pro tem Vo, in between Solanki and the gabby Barrows for over an hour discussing the charter.

Gallucci, at the table below the dais, is barely six feet from the equally talkative Solanki, who asked a litany of questions to feed Barrow's ego.

LCCN has been told off the record by several employees that people were/are getting COVID inside Cerritos City Hall.

Yet two of the city's leaders are on camera in a meeting not wearing masks, and there are others just off the dais in a closed room handling the television and video equipment.

Even if Barrows and Solanki were vaccinated, they can still contract the B-117 variant and be asymptomatic, spreading, and possibly hospitalizing, people around them. That variant is deadlier and more transmissible.

It was the height of hypocrisy by two leaders of Cerritos and the other three should censure them for their callous disregard for others.

Look at what percentage of residence voted against your sales tax. This increase could cost seniors $600 a year. Sorry, cut back on some of your perks.

Nepotism: where did this objection come up? Nobody complained when Councilman Yokoyama's sister was appointed by Pulido or when Mayor Solanki's son was appointed. Is there something we really need to be concerned about how about our health and safety?

Residency: where did this idea that a person living in Cerritos for only 30 days would have the knowledge of what is happening, what is needed and furthermore who to contact to get out of this info. I could never support this person if they became a candidate.

Lastly no change to term limits, asking a person to serve three terms is nearly a generation, that's very selfish.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Re: Changes to City Charter

After trying to read over 85 pages, which is a lot of wasted paper, I am very unhappy with some of Councilman Barrows suggestions, was he the only one who made suggestions, shouldn't all members be included in all in the discussions. Are there minutes so residents can find out what was said by other members? Was Mr. Barrows elected chair person?

My main concern are the four items mentioned in the charter review some of these ideas do not appeal to me.

Tax liability property tax, do you really expect residents to approve this?

El Rancho Verde Park To Get Major Facelift

STAFF REPORT

In fall 2020, La Palma received a significant grant for the replacement of playground equipment at El Rancho Verde Park the 5.2 acre park located on the border of La Palma and Cerritos just off of Moody Ave.

The project includes demolition and removal of the current equipment, all park benches, and surfacing; installation and new electrical grounding of new GameTime equipment and park benches; and replacement of rubberized surfacing at each play area.

Currently there is only partial rubberized surfacing at the 5-12 year area, which is not a standard of current playground best practices.

Additionally full rubberized surfacing will reduce the required sand maintenance at the playground and is more accessible for those with disabilities.

The current playground equipment and surfacing was installed in 2006 and is in significant decline (paint wear, early onset of rust/corrosion, etc.) and does not meet the latest ADA standards.

Life expectancy of playground equipment is approximately 15 years.

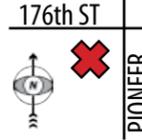

Starting March 3, the playground will be closed for construction and is anticipated to reopen mid-April 2021.

Assistance League of Fullerton Fighting Food Insecurity

50 LOAVES IN 50 DAYS: Assistance League members Susan Schilling, Sue Sherard, Helen Cohen and Wei-ling Louie celebrate another successful food delivery with James Kennedy, Services Navigator for Pathways of Hope.

The mission of one of the many Assistance League of Fullerton's programs is the long-standing philanthropic program called "Operation New Start."

ONS provides clothing and domestic items to adults and dependent children who are homeless and/or fleeing domestic abuse. This is done via referrals from The Women's Transitional Living Center and Pathways of Hope in Fullerton.

In 2019-20, ONS provided over 900 clients of WTLC & Pathways with clothing and merchandise valued at $26,000; now they are tackling food insecurity.

Members of the ALF began collecting and donating non-perishable food items to Pathways' on a monthly basis. But then a call came for bread, which must be delivered and used quickly.

ALF members accepted the challenge and committed to 50 loaves for 5 days during the week of February 22. Every morning members gather and drive to Northgate Market of La Habra, then deliver loaves of bread to the Pathways food distribution center.

Not coincidentally, the Pathways of Hope food distribution center serves an average of 50 clients per day since the pandemic began. James Kennedy, Service Navigator at Pathways, expressed sincere appreciation to Assistance League members for the outpouring of support.

Another need is fresh tortillas. Come March, members are stepping up to deliver 50 packages of tortillas per day for another 5 day period.

Assistance League Fullerton's efforts are part of a nationwide "Call to Action" week, Feb. 22-26, by Assistance League chapters across the country to raise awareness of needs in their communities.

ALF serves of Fullerton, Brea, Buena Park, La Habra, Placentia and Yorba Linda. Visit assistanceleague.org/fullerton/ for more information.

Publishing House Provides Books to the Community

BRIDGE STAFF visited shops, clinics, restaurants, manufacturing plants, police and fire stations in Commerce to provide thousands of Stay Well booklets to employees. They are seen here at the Smart and Final in Commerce.

STAFF REPORT

Now more than ever, prevention is vital, according to Bridge Publications, the Commerce-based all-digital in-house printing facility for author L. Ron Hubbard's non-fiction works.

"This community is our home," says Camila Gonzalez, Bridge's Director of Public Relations. "That's why we reach out to empower our neighbors with information on how to stay well."

Gonzalez is referring to a series of simple illustrated How to Stay Well booklets translated in 21 languages and published in Commerce by the Church of Scientology Dissemination and Distribution Center. In all, the Center printed and shipped more than 7 million copies for volunteer distribution to neighborhoods around the world.

Bridge staff visited shops, clinics, restaurants, manufacturing plants, police and fire stations in Commerce and East LA to provide thousands of these Stay Well booklets to employees and customers.

"The information was easy to understand and very relevant to the most vulnerable members of our community on how to stay safe during these difficult times," said Commerce Councilman Hugo Argumedo, who brought copies of the booklets to local senior centers.

The assistant supervisor of Trident Care health laboratory noted the booklets are vital as she had run into many who didn't see the need to take preventative measures. "There are even nurses who didn't understand how or when to isolate themselves or their patients," she said.

"People are doing things that don't help and make the current scene worse," said Robert Taylor, Commerce Industrial Council Chamber of Commerce Executive Director. "These booklets give them the knowledge of how to keep themselves and others safe." To get the information out even further, Taylor emailed all Commerce Chamber members letting them know of Bridge's offer to provide them free booklets.

Stay Well booklets, signage, and more than a dozen brief videos are available to read, watch and download from the Prevention Resource Center at Scientology.org/staywell.

For more information, contact Camila Gonzalez at 323 888 6200 or cgonzalez@bridgepub.com.

Cerritos' Chen closing in as one of Duke University's all-time top women's tennis players

Chen could also become the third player in Duke's history to earn All-American honors in all four years.

BY LOREN KOPFF
@LORENKOPFF ON TWITTER

The City of Cerritos is no stranger in producing top collegiate tennis players and one of its own will be concluding a successful career with one of the nation's top women's programs. But the path of Kelly Chen's success isn't your normal 'was a star in high school' story because she never attended a high school in the city, nor any other city for that matter.

While her oldest sister Tiffany, and middle sister Beverly, attended Cerritos High, the youngest sibling did all her high schooling at home in front of a computer through Laurel Springs Academy, an accredited online private school.

"My family put me into online schooling just because I was able to travel more that way," Chen said. "I didn't go to Cerritos High, but I did go to Tetzlaff Middle School for a bit. At the time, my goal was to play professional tennis."

At first, Chen said it wasn't a hard decision to choose Laurel Springs Academy but once she was done with high school, Chen admitted there was a little part of her that wished she had attended Cerritos High just to 'have that experience'. The classes she took online were no different than the one she would have taken at Cerritos High.

"I feel like it's a bit unfortunate for me that I didn't get that high school experience that everybody talks about and stuff," Chen said. "I think I was a bit bummed out, for sure, not to do all those activities that my sisters always talk about. But [in] the tennis aspect, I made a lot of great connections and friends. So, it kind of made up for it in the end."

A normal high school day for Chen would have her play tennis for about three to four hours plus fitness before doing her schoolwork. After that, she would sometimes go to a tutor at several place. She added that she wouldn't have time to have 'fun'.

Chen began her athletic ambitions playing golf for five years before jumping to tennis and has been doing that for 11 years. She credits her oldest sibling as the one person who motivated her to play the sport. Both older siblings played golf at Cerritos High, but not tennis. Tiffany later decided to quit golf and play tennis outside of high school and that's what motivated the current Duke star to play tennis.

Chen didn't attend any of the high schools in Cerritos because she began playing in International Tennis Federation (ITF) tournaments and in local tournaments, which began around 2013 or 2014, according to the tennis star.

"I was really motivated by my sisters and the coaches I had when I was young," Chen said. "My main goal was to play professional tennis. So, one of the ways to get up there was to play in those ITF tournaments and eventually those pro circuit tournaments."

She said she had always idolized Belgian star Kim Clijsters, who was the first player she saw when she went to watch a professional match at La Costa or other Southern California venues. Years later, Chen would look up to several American players, especially Serena and Venus Williams.

Originally, Chen had looked at Duke, Stanford University, University of California, Berkeley, UCLA and University of North Carolina. She was contacted by a coach at Duke during her junior year of high school. Despite numerous exchanges of messages, Chen did not commit to Duke until the beginning of her senior year, and she chose the Atlantic Coast Conference institution because, as she put it, "was far away from home".

"But ultimately when I took a visit down here, I really liked how the team and everybody here at Duke...it just felt like a family," Chen said. "And the environment, it felt like a very comfortable place for me to stay. I also knew some of the girls beforehand, as we played junior tennis together. So, I kind of grew up together with these people."

Another reason why Chen chose Duke might have something to do with its head coach of 25 years, Jamie Ashworth. Prior to this season, Ashworth had gone 533-131 with the Blue Devils, including 204-40 in the ACC and though last Saturday, Duke was sporting a 7-1 record.

As successful as the Duke women's tennis program has been during Ashworth's tenure in Durham, N.C., Chen admitted she didn't know as much about it. In fact, she recalls Ashworth had some of his players contact her occasionally prior to committing to Duke. The only thing she knew was that Duke was one of the nation's top schools for tennis.

"Jamie has really created these top college players and...I wanted to be a part of that team; that legacy that Jamie has created here," Chen said.

Chen, who is majoring in psychology, was an immediate force as a freshman, going 25-1 in dual singles action and racking up 40 wins as a singles player, which was tops on the team. She also won all 14 of her ACC matches, the only player to do that. Pairing up with Samantha Harris, Chen went 25-9 in doubles action, the second best record on the team and among her honors in her first year, she became the 12th Duke women's tennis athlete to win the ACC Freshman of the Year award. Chen was also an Intercollegiate Tennis Association (ITA) All-American selection, where she ended the season ranked 28th in singles play.

"I think as a freshman, there's not much pressure coming in," Chen said. "I think I was seen as an underdog in a way as to all the freshmen that come into college. I think I was just very relaxed. I had nothing to lose, but I think also, with the reassurance I get from the staff here, it has made it 100 times more better for me on the court, as well as off the court. Credit to them for my success."

"I think [in my] freshman year, I just wanted to have fun on court," she later said. "I wasn't really expecting much from myself. It's a new environment for me. There's definitely a lot of things I had to get used to as a freshman."

The next year, Chen began the season ranked 12th by the ITA before going 35-9 overall as a singles player, again tops on the team, and teamed with Meible Chi in doubles to go 16-5 overall. The Blue Devils went 27-4 overall for the second straight season and advanced to the NCAA semifinals for the second straight season. Chen once again was an ITA All-American and was on the Second Team All-ACC.

In the COVID-19-shortened season, Chen was ranked fifth by the ITA before going 21-6 in singles play, and for the third straight season, received ITA All-America accolades. She posted a 6-1 mark as the No. 1 singles player and teamed with Chloe Beck to become Duke's No. 1 doubles duo. There, Chen went 14-8 overall and 8-4 in dual matches. As a team, the Blue Devils went 11-2 with a Mar. 1 match against William and Mary being the last time Duke would play that season.

Chen began hitting a few months later and while she says having a few months off was nice, at the same time, it was tough not being active in tennis for a few months. Because the gyms were also shut down, Chen began to run around her neighborhood and set up a mini-home gym in North Carolina.

"I made the most out of it during the pandemic," Chen said.

Chen was also active in the fall as she competed in the ITA Fall Nationals and the ITA Regional Championships on her way to becoming another ITA All-American. Chen has also qualified for the NCAA Singles Championships her first two seasons and is on her way to a third trip this season.

Among her records during her first three years at Duke, Chen is tied for first with Kaitlyn McCarthy (2017) in posting a 14-0 record in ACC action for a season, most wins in a season in ACC action and third in school history for wins as a freshman in singles play. Chen could also become the third player in Duke's history to earn All-American honors in all four years. Amanda Johnson (2001-2004) and Vanessa Webb (1996-1999) are the only other four-year All-Americans.

"I'm honored to get those awards from the ACC and the NCAA organization," Chen said. "But it just kind of shows the hard work that I've put in in my game as well as the Duke women's staff that's been helping me to achieve these awards."

This season, Chen is currently 6-3 in singles play and 9-2 in doubles action with Georgia Drummy as her partner. Chen has also teamed with Beck once in a 3-2 loss to North Carolina State University on Jan. 16.

"There's a lot of responsibility as a senior on the team just to keep everybody motivated and kind of in check," Chen said. "So far, we've been doing pretty good [as a team] except that rare loss to Georgia Tech at the end of January. But other than that, our team has been looking good. Overall, we are capable of winning the ACC Tournament and the NCAA [Tournament]."

When Chen graduates from Duke, she says she would like to play a little bit in pro circuit and if it doesn't work out, Chen's next ambition would be to get into the sports business

NEWS AND NOTES FROM PRESS ROW

Area coaches, athletic directors frantically putting schedules together

By Loren Kopff
@LorenKopff on Twitter

Now that high school athletics have resumed, the task of putting together any type of schedule for all the sports has been an ongoing feat for coaches and athletic directors. While that is going on, the remainder of the fall season and the upcoming spring season, in which some of the sports have already started their 2021 seasons, just got one step easier as the latest case rate numbers were released Tuesday.

Last week, Los Angeles County, Orange County and San Luis Obispo County were the only counties within the CIF-Southern Section that could resume its return to play activities. Now, all eight counties that house a CIF-SS school are good to go as their numbers are below the threshold of 14 cases per 100,000 people. Los Angeles County dropped from 12.3 to 7.2 while Orange County fell from 11.9 to 7.6.

Most likely, girls volleyball and boys and girls water polo for the area schools will not happen as those sports have an end date of Mar. 20 and it would have been tough to rush even a four or five-game league schedule with a start date of Feb. 23. Plus, there is still uncertainty with indoor sports, plus the topic of testing for water polo athletes.

But, the other two fall sports, cross country and football, have until Mar. 27 and Apr. 17 respectively to get events in. The 605 League tentatively has their cross country and football schedules set. On Mar. 13, the league will conduct a time trial cross country meet on the Cerritos High campus with each of the six member schools running separately. Artesia High will go at 8:00, followed by Cerritos at 8:50, John Glenn High at 9:50. Oxford Academy at 10:30, Pioneer High at 11:20 and Whitney High at 12:10. The same schedule will be used the following Saturday while on Mar. 27, the league will go in reverse order.

Football will most likely go with a league schedule with games being played on Mar. 26, Apr. 1 and Apr. 16. However, schools may wish to add anywhere from one to three non-league games if they choose.

Gahr High athletic director and head football coach Greg Marshall indicated earlier in the week that the Gladiators will probably play only three games, all against San Gabriel Valley League opponents, while some of the other SGVL teams will play as many as five games. It appears that Valley Christian High won't play any football games as no schedules have been posted on its athletic website, nor on MaxPreps.com.

With a lot of focus now centering on the spring sports, it's important to know the dates of the first contest schools can have an event. Girls tennis began its season on Feb. 22 and V.C. has already played three matches, falling to Calvary Chapel Costa Mesa 10-8 on Feb. 24, defeating Ontario Christian High 15-3 the next day and losing to Rosary High 11-7 this past Monday.

The dates of the first contests for the other spring sports are as follows: boys and girls soccer (last Saturday), boys tennis (this past Monday), badminton (Saturday), boys and girls basketball (Mar. 12), boys and girls swimming and boys volleyball (Mar. 13), baseball and softball (Mar. 19) and boys and girls golf and boys and girls track and field (Mar. 20).

as possible. Her 35 years of experience as a nurse and as a leader have been vital during this challenging time.

"I am truly honored to be selected as 32nd Senate District Woman of the Year," Jones said. "As an RN, I have always been passionate about caring for our community. The COVID-19 pandemic presented unprecedented challenges and it has been a privilege to be part of a team leading efforts to help create innovative ways of providing excellent patient care."

In the past year, Jones has served as the Operations Section Chief on the PIH Health Downey Hospital Command Center team. In this role, she developed processes for personal protective equipment use, enhanced patient care protocols, collaborated with nursing leaders to open additional COVID-19 units, served on the proning team (process relieving pressure on the lungs) in the Intensive Care Unit, and provided emotional support to staff and patients alike.

Her all-hands-on-deck approach to the pandemic guided employees as they shifted to new roles of patient care to meet the growing staffing needs.

Jones, whose two sisters are nurses at PIH Health, has shown compassion, with a heightened awareness, for the emotional well-being of patients and team members, and has worked with key stakeholders to provide solutions to staffing, equipment and space challenges. "We are delighted that Stephanie was named 32nd Senate District Woman of the Year. Her dedication to our community is unwavering and she is an exemplary nurse modeling dedication and compassionate care. SECURING OUR WATER FUTURE TODAY

WRD manages two of the most utilized urban groundwater basins in the nation. Groundwater from these basins provides 50% of the total water supply for four million residents within WRD's service area, which includes 43 cities.

Albert Robles Center for Water Recycling & Environmental Learning

WRD's Albert Robles Center purifies 14 million gallons of water per day for use in groundwater replenishment. This locally sustainable and reliable water source protects the quality and quantity of local groundwater, creating drought-resiliency for the basin.

Robert W. Goldsworthy Groundwater Desalter

The Goldsworthy Desalter treats 5 million gallons of brackish (salty) groundwater that is trapped inland due to historical seawater intrusion. The salt is removed using Reverse Osmosis and the fresh drinking water is then delivered through the City of Torrance distribution system.

Leo J. Vander Lans Advanced Water Treatment Facility

The Vander Lans Treatment Facility purifies 8 million gallons of water per day for use in coastal injection wells. Water from the facility prevents seawater intrusion and provides supplemental groundwater replenishment.

WRD water treatment facilities help reduce demand for water imported from the Bay Delta and the Colorado River by producing locally sustainable water resources.

million profit in 2019. Working out of three buildings in Cerritos, the company employs 1000 people.

REVOLVE will lease the building for ten years with three options to extend for an additional five years for each option. The company will pay $48,000 a month in rent with a 3% increase every three years.

Construction and repairs on the building, awarded to PCN3, Inc., will begin sometime this month and is expected to take one year when REVOLVE will take possession of the building.

The city will spend $7.5 million improving the building using $1.6 million in insurance proceeds already received, with an expected $3.6 million in additional proceeds to come later. The city claimed that it netted $1.1 million from the Astor cars sales for a total of $6.3 million to fund $7.5 million in repairs and $400,000 in architectural fees.

Anticipated revenue from the building is nearly $6 million in years one through ten, so the city will "recoup" the shortfall by the end of year two.

With the number of people REVOLVE employs - 1,000 - parking, ingress, and egress had to be considered.

Cerritos went next door and talked to El Dorado Community Church and subsequently entered into a parking agreement.

Currently, the Mullikin-REVOLVE building has 130 total parking stalls while the church has 69. Cerritos and the church agreed to 25 years with the church allowing access to 49 parking stalls.

Per the agreement, the city will improve the existing landscape, parking lot, sprinkler systems, exterior lighting, clean up problem trees and provide a reclaimed water stub for the church.

There are huge benefits to keeping REVOLVE in the city, the most important being the company is consistently in the top 25 in sales tax generation for the city.

REVOLVE is also active in the community donating over $260,000 in PPE equipment, donating money to voter participation efforts, partnering with local schools for career advancement and awareness opportunities, and donating money to various local charities.

current service and create a dedicated program for seniors who wanted to receive the COVID-19 vaccine but had transportation issues.

"COVID-19 vaccinations are incredibly important right now for those that are eligible and to those that will become eligible in the near future," said City Manager Steve Carmona. "This program will allow for our most vulnerable population to receive the COVID-19 vaccine in a timely manner without having to worry about transportation."

Mayor Raul Elias would like to thank Councilmember Andrew C. Lara for his leadership on the Health Ad Hoc Committee and the City Council and City Staff's support for implementing this plan. Eligible residents who have made an appointment at the Downey location are able to book transportation at least 24 hours in advance by calling 866.908.7289 and using account number 12616.

According to the staff report, several notice of violations have been issued with the Patel's failing to respond to any of them.

When that is the case, municipalities can apply for an abatement warrant, which the city was successful in doing. The city, who has paid to clean up the place, also served the owner with three abatement cost recovery invoices and is currently preparing the fourth invoice.

The owners continued to be unresponsive and have not paid the invoices.

If that is the case, Artesia has the right to set up a special assessment through the Los Angeles County Controller's Office to seek reimbursement for the cost related to abatement actions and did so placing the assessment on the 2020 property tax roll.

That got the attention of the owners, whose son in law finally called the city in December 2020 inquiring about the special assessment.

Following that conversation, the owners apparently hired a local landscaper and cleaned the house up, staff check periodically to ensure the house is kept clean.

As of the City Council meeting, at the property owner owes $14,000 for the special assessment, $6,000 in citations, and $7,200 for abatement costs.

The owner's son-in-law said he would give the owner the invoices.

WRD GENERAL MANAGER RETIRES AFTER 30 YEARS

After a career spanning nearly 30 years with the Water Replenishment District (WRD), General Manager Robb Whitaker has announced his retirement. Hired as Water Resources Engineer in 1991, Whitaker became District Engineer in 2000 and Assistant General Manager in 2001. He was appointed General Manager by the Board in 2003 and is the longest-serving General Manager in WRD's 61-year history.

During Whitaker's tenure, the district completed its Water Independence Now (WIN) Initiative, a 15-year effort to implement a suite of programs and projects to make WRD completely independent of imported water for groundwater replenishment. Once one of the largest users of imported water in Southern California, WRD now meets its replenishment needs with a more reliable, sustainable and affordable local supply.

"Virtually every legacy project or program completed by WRD was conceived, developed, or implemented by Robb Whitaker," Board President John Allen said. "His accomplishments in the past 30 years have laid the foundation upon which WRD will build for the next 30. WRD as an agency has been fortunate to have him. The people of the region and the state are lasting beneficiaries of his service."

The district's Safe Drinking Water and Disadvantaged Communities Programs were also developed during Mr. Whitaker's time as general manager. These programs have helped several small water systems access vital funding and technical assistance to allow them to remediate contaminated water in underserved communities.

"Robb Whitaker understood that access to clean and safe water shouldn't depend on your zip code," said Assemblymember Anthony Rendon. "When we wanted to make sure people served by water systems in my district had clean water, I turned to Robb Whitaker and WRD. We worked together to make sure those systems had access to treatment programs."

Director Rob Katherman said, "Robb also led the successful effort to create a legal framework for the storage of groundwater, an accomplishment that enables what Robb coined the WIN 4 ALL initiative, a suite of programs and projects to eliminate the need for imported water in the region by 2040. Thanks to Robb, that vision is well underway.

"Robb's expertise as an engineer is complemented by an even temperament, an ability to communicate effectively, and the skill to manage complex projects from beginning to end. He has assembled an exceptionally talented staff of professionals that mirror those qualities and has provided a template to ensure that WRD is well-positioned going forward."

In July of 2020, Whitaker received the prestigious Excellence in Water Leadership award from the Association of California Water Agencies (ACWA). This award recognizes those who have made a remarkable and visible contribution to the enhancement, protection or development of water resources in California. In announcing the award, ACWA President Steve LaMar said, "Robb has demonstrated remarkable leadership throughout his career, but especially with regard to the Water Independence Now Initiative. He is a visionary leader who has continually demonstrated excellence in professionalism and collaborative engagement."

In a letter to the Board this past September, Whitaker said he would stay on until March of 2021 to ensure as seamless a transition as possible.

WONDERWORD

By DAVID OUELLET

HOW TO PLAY: First, read the list of words, then look at the puzzle. The words are found in all directions - vertically, horizontally, diagonally, backward. Circle each letter of a word found and strike it off the list. The letters are often used more than once so do not cross them out. It is best to find the big words first. When you find all the words listed in the clues you'll have a number of letters left over that spell out the WONDERWORD. To see the answer use the link below the puzzle.

Children's Village at Miller Children's & Women's Hospital Long Beach Sees First Patients

STAFF REPORT

The brand-new Cherese Mari Lauhere Children's Village located on the campus of MemorialCare Miller Children's & Women's Hospital Long Beach opened its doors for patients last week. The 80,000-sq. ft., four-story building houses a variety of medical and supportive care services, making the health care experience more efficient for thousands of children and their families across the region.

The Children's Village is the only building of its kind in Los Angeles and Orange Counties with a one-stop-shop approach to outpatient specialty care for kids. In one kid-friendly location, families have access to a pharmacy, laboratory, imaging services, rehabilitation gyms, family resource center, education center and more.

Brothers Joziah, 2, and Aaron, 19, were among the first patients to be seen in the new building by their specialty physician, Dr. Jacqueline Casillas, pediatric hematologist/oncologist and medical director of the Jonathan Jaques Children's Cancer Institute at Miller's. The brothers share the same rare genetic disorder called X-linked lymphoproliferative (XLP) disease that causes the immune system to overreact to infections.

This disease is characterized by a life-long vulnerability to Epstein-Barr virus (EBV), a common type of virus that usually does not cause symptoms other than a brief infection, but people with XLP can have severe reactions to EBV infections that can lead to death due to development of bone marrow failure and development of malignant lymphoma.

"Because of the type of condition my sons have, we have to visit the doctor and the lab often," says Desiree Nagao, mother of Joziah and Aaron. "We have been going to Miller's for 18 years and it's been most of the same staff that entire time. Knowing that my kids are in the same caring hands, but just in a new, more convenient place that meets all of our needs is so nice."

Many children like Aaron and Joziah have complex health conditions or may have more than one health issue, requires families to travel to various specialty medical offices. Now, all the specialty care and services they need are centralized in the Children's Village.

"Many illnesses affect kids differently than adults, which is why children need health care designed for their unique needs," said Graham Tse, M.D., chief medical officer at Miller's. "With the Children's Village we have created that and established a new benchmark for children's health care."

Every member of the Children's Village care team is specially trained to care for kids and teens and address their unique health care needs, including its roster of physicians that are expertly trained in more than 30 pediatric specialties, such as orthopedics, pulmonology and oncology.

Families can learn more about the Children's Village by taking a virtual tour or by visiting millerchildrens.org/Village.

Helping Others with Vision Loss During Pandemic

BY TAMMYE MCDUFF

It has become increasingly demanding keeping up with rapidly changing recommendations and rules about staying safe during CoVID-19.

Those with visual impairments have faced disproportionate vulnerabilities. Newly release data shows that since the onset of the pandemic clinical depression within the low vision and blind community is being reported at three times the level than the general population.

Vera Thompson, 69, lives in Los Angeles and is among the visually impaired. She is challenged daily by issues such as social distancing.

A paralegal by trade, Thompson was diagnosed with Glaucoma, a condition often accompanied by rapid vision loss.

“For those with low vision or blind like me, social distancing is impossible when you are unable to see six feet in front of you,” said Thompson.

While many businesses and public spaces have introduced new layouts or restrictions to try and limit the spread of the virus, these adjustments make places harder for visually impaired people to navigate, meaning they go out much less, often forgoing needed medical care, adding to feelings of isolation and despair.

“Everything was quickly becoming harder to see and driving to work was no longer an option. I lost my freedom and livelihood all at once,” Thompson remarked. “I joined every Los Angeles low vision and blind support group and community program available, but none were geared for older people suffering from vision loss later in life.”

Thompson missed being around technology and realized that getting back on her computer during the pandemic was important for her to stay informed and in touch.

She is among the growing number of those with visual impairments who have turned to Hadley.edu to help navigate life during the pandemic.

Hadley is a nonprofit organization and one of the nations’ oldest and largest providers of free distance and online learning for adults with vision loss.

Hadley’s new programming called ‘Expand Your Sights’ allows users to choose from four color contrasts; three different font sizes; and choose for a variety of information from daily living to working and learning Braille.

There is even a complete catalog of topics to choose from that can be read or hear through audio.

These podcasts can help individuals that are facing challenges from diagnosis to support and relearning how to be socially confident after vision loss.

Through her own personal experience, Thompson was recruited by Hadley to serve a role in assisting other low vision individuals as part of a group of advisors chosen to provide input for the design and implementation of new technology, which takes a dramatically different approach to reaching an audience that is becoming increasingly difficult to reach, primarily older adults facing vision loss.

Built on months of research and development work, the new platform is entirely based on the needs and wants of visually impaired adults to keep them connected.

“For me, the world during the pandemic is not so dark anymore, emotionally or otherwise,” added Thompson, “I was honored to provide Hadley with my input and contribute to the development of the important resource for others with vision loss.”

Founded in 1920 by William Hadley, an educator who lost his eyesight later in life, Hadley offers practical help, connection and support free of charge to anyone with a visual impairment, their families and professionals supporting them.

Hadley serves nearly 150,000 individuals each year, reaching all 50 states and 100 countries. And more people learn Braille from Hadley than from any other organization worldwide.
